MORNING, NOVEMBER 21, 1837.

PRICE $6 PER ANN. IN ADVANCE

MANHATTAN HOUSE.
No. 6 DUANE-STREET, NEW YORK.
JAMES RYAN, from the Howard House, Boston, recently informs the public, that he has taken the large building in Duane street, 6 doors from Broadway, known as Rutgers' College, for the purpose of a HOTEL and RESTAURANT. The interior of the building has been entirely taken out, and refitted expressly to suit the business of the present occupant.

Mr Ryan will keep the Manhattan House for the accommodation of Clubs and Parties. The best wines and Liquors will be furnished from his cellar, having been carefully selected from the best stocks in Boston, a large portion of them being of the choice stocks long in the cellar of Mr Gallagher, late of the Exchange Coffee House. Rooms will be furnished for Societies and Courts Martial. Transient and permanent boarders will be accommodated in the best style known in the country; and elegant apartments will be let, with or without board.

The Table d'Hôte will be supplied with every delicacy of the various seasons. Breakfasts, Dinners and Suppers, of every description, will be served at short notice, and various Soups will be ready every hour, from eleven to three. Mr Ryan is confident that his department, his own experience, added to the skill of the persons employed as cuisiniers, will enable him to please the most fastidious epicures, both in respect of quality and style.

Those friends who have known the character of Mr Ryan's House in Boston, he is assured, will find his accommodations better, his means more ample, and his dinner quite as interesting; and from such strangers in this city, a love excellence in the various departments of his profession, he would beg the favor of an early call, with the full hope of giving satisfaction.

The House was opened on the 15th June, 1837. epft je17

MARLBORO' HOTEL.

The subscriber would respectfully give notice that he has taken the MARLBORO' HOTEL, and is now ready to see his friends. The house has been thoroughly repaired, enlarged, and neatly painted and papered. The furniture and bedding are new, and the accommodations in every respect are believed to be equal to any other Hotel in the city. No pains will be spared to furnish the tables for every variety the market affords. Efforts will be made to furnish the tables with the products of free labor, and provision will also be made for those who prefer vegetarian diet. Religious worship will be regularly maintained every day, and as far as possible to prevent, and to be received or will be settled on the spot. No smoking allowed. The Hotel will be kept entirely on the Temperance principle, and while not a particle of intoxicating liquor will be sold or used, yet will be a quiet home for gentlemen travelling with their families, as well as for others. There are several suits of rooms for the accommodation of small families as permanent boarders. Application for permanent board will be received at the Hotel every day.

over that the bills referred to by him originated in the Senate, and not in the House of Representatives. In consequence of the appointment of the committee of the Senate before the committees of the other House, the Finance Committee of the Senate matured the bills before they were considered by the Committee of Ways and Means in the House of Representatives. The latter committee, to avoid unnecessary delay and collision with the Senate, adopted the bills, some with and some without amendments.

Two of these bills were made unintelligible to the Secretary of the Treasury by the patching which they underwent in the Senate; namely, the bill relating to the claims on the Deposite Banks, and that relating to the fees of the District Attorneys. To explain how the former bill was rendered so, probably Mr Webster can give his friend Mr Fletcher some account of a midnight scene when a certain amendment was adopted; and as to the latter bill, Mr Clay can inform him how it was rendered contradictory in its provisions. These blunders are, however, not without a precedent in previous legislation. The cited compromise act contains in the first section a palpable grammatical error.

BOSTON MORNING POST.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1837.

Gov. Schley, in his message to the Legislature of Georgia, takes an open and decided stand in favor of the policy of the general government. He declares with much satisfaction that Georgia, "notwithstanding some of her citizens of character and influence dissent from her principles, is still on the side of the Constitution."

The following passages from the message will lay hard on whig stomachs:

"The Government of the United States has no right to interfere with the monetary concerns of the country, except 'to coin money, and regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coins.' The banking system is an emanation from undelegated State sovereignty, which, alone, has the power to modify or control it. If over-issues, or other irregularities have caused embarrassment, the remedy is in restriction and retrenchment, and not in bold clamor against feigned evils, or the establishment of a national bank to regulate the States, as well as the currency."

"The argument most used at the South in support of such an institution, and which, in the minds of commercial men, seems to have had more influence than any other, is, that it will equalize exchange; but experience has not verified this pretension. In prosperous times the great staples of the southern States supply the means of adjusting balances against them, but in periods of pressure and panic every thing appears impotent, and even the great bank has been found to be either perverse or powerless."

"In a conmercial country like this, banks, conducted on proper principles, are of unquestionable benefit. It is only from abuse of the power to grant, and of the grant itself, that evils connected with them have arisen. If their issues were restricted by being adjusted to their specie, instead of their nominal capital, or by limiting their profits, we should not so frequently suffer by great expansions and contractions of the currency; and the convertibility of their notes into gold and silver, at the will of the holder, would cease to be mere theory."

The Governor is in favor of requiring the banks to resume specie payments on a certain day, sufficiently distant to allow time for the present crop to be made available, and of disfranchising those which thereafter shall be delinquent.

It is stated in the message that Mr Nicholas Biddle, of Philadelphia, is the ostensible, if not the real owner of five thousand four hundred and fifty shares of the stock of the "Insurance Bank of Columbus." The remainder, amounting to only five hundred and fifty shares, is owned by eight citizens of Georgia. Nicholas seems to be enlarging his dominions. The effects which the power of this grasping mogul is capable of producing upon the local interests of Georgia, are justly hinted at by Gov. Schley.

The New York Utica Observer, in alluding to the election in that state, says—

"It is a circumstance not less remarkable than the event of the late election, that the democracy here, and we believe everywhere, bear their defeat with a much more philosophic temper than the federalists do their victory. We are nothing daunted by it. Why should we be? The opposition have gained nothing which they can retain or profit by; we have lost nothing which it is not most clearly in our power to regain. The simple truth is that our lukewarmness and bad humor have given the game to the federalists. They have taken the election by default, as the canvass will show. Take Oneida county as an illustration. The newly elected sheriff had in 1834 upwards of 6000 votes, and was beaten; he has succeeded now with a vote short of 5000. How is this? Surely not by an accession of federal strength; as surely not by any real diminution of democratic strength. We have as many voters now as we had then; but for various reasons they declined to take a part in the contest."

The whigs are getting bloody-minded again. The Wheeling Times says—"the people (he means the broken down speculators) must suffer what they now suffer for the balance of four years, or they must revolt, and demand justice at the point of the bayonet." In this way Messrs. Biomy and Webster talked at Baltimore, on SUNDAY, March 20, 1834.

The United States Senate.—On the 4th of March, 1839, the term of service of the following gentlemen will expire: N. P. Talladge of New York; Benjamin Swift, Vt.; Daniel Webster, Massachusetts; Asher Robbins, R. I.; John M. Niles, Conn.; R. H. Bayard, Del.; Samuel L. Southard, N. J.; Samuel McKeon, Pa.; Wm. C. Rives, Va.; John Black, Miss.; John Kent, Md.; Thomas Morris, Ohio; John Tipton, Ind.; Thomas H. Benton, Mo.; Wm. S. Fulton, Arkansas; Lucius Lyon, Mich.

Besides these, there is a vacancy to be filled in Georgia, growing out of the resignation of Mr King, and perhaps another in place of Mr Cuthbert of Georgia, whom it is rumored will resign his seat.

The following paragraph was so crookedly printed in yesterday's Post, that two of the distinguished individuals alluded to in it were exceedingly dissatisfied, and we therefore reprint it in better shape:—

N. B.—The object of the visit of these mighty men of the forest has not been publicly announced, but it is hinted that they have come on as a Committee of Congratulation to the Whigs. It was not decided, when our paper went to press, where the mutual pow-wow was to be held, but Joseph T. of the Centinel was deputed to wait on the Major, and get him to "achieve" another "song."

The whigs at East Boston, at their celebration uttered but one just complaint during the evening, and that was a toast to Maj. Barton.

Dr Hayes offered a sentiment, but the President thought it rather deficient in the attire savour he wished to distinguish all that proceeded from his company, (with Mr Webster on his right) and accordingly moved an amendment, which gave great point to Dr. Hayes's inspiration, ex gr.—

By Dr Jacob Hayes, Rep. elect from East Boston—The Whigs of Maine.

[The President begged leave to make an addition to Dr Hayes's toast. The Whigs of Maine—Mainly Massachusetts Whigs.]

This made the whiggies laugh until they cried—after the agitation had a little subsided, "Mr Eastburn achieved a song!"

The Committee of Public Safety are deliberating upon the alarming "apathy" reigning in the whig cause at Hull. An attempt will probably be made to get the Atlas into more extensive circulation there.

Mr Phelps's tavern in Bedford was destroyed by fire on Sunday.

(3) We find a very interesting paper in an English periodical, giving some account of the strange history of Mademoiselle Gautier, who was one of the greatest ornaments of the French stage at the beginning of the eighteenth century. She was of a tall and commanding figure, and her face, independently of the regularity of feature which made it a model for the sculptor, possessed such exquisite variety of expression, that she could accommodate herself with equal ease to the lightest comedy or the deepest pathos. Besides these professional advantages, she was a person of great accomplishments, being celebrated for the point and piquancy of her verses in the wittiest circles of Paris; and excelling no less in the productions of her pencil than of her pen. A person with such endowments—young—beautiful—and at the very height of celebrity as an actress, needed nothing farther to excite the public curiosity as to every circumstance connected with her. And inquiry only served to add still more to the wonder with which she was regarded. Her bodily strength was prodigious. With the delicate looking hand, which seemed fit only for the graceful exercises of the fan, she could roll up a plate of massive silver as if it were a wafer. Nor did she hesitate to send a challenge to a trial of muscle to the Marshal Saxe, a very powerful man, who plumed himself on his Herculean strength. The challenge was accepted, and the struggle took place. It was agreed that the victory should be adjudged to whichever of the combatants first bent down the other's arm—both resting their elbows on a table. In this trial the elbows touch each other, the hands being held up, and the victory depends entirely on the strength of wrist. After an arduous contest, the Marshal succeeded in bending down the arm of his fair antagonist; but he was forced to acknowledge, that he had never encountered any one whom it had cost him more trouble to overcome. But the beautiful amazon did not restrict her exhibitions of strength or daring to her own country. In that dissolve age, and in so unscrupulous a profession as the stage at that period was considered, it is not to be wondered at if Mademoiselle Gautier shared in the general immorality. One of the most celebrated of her lovers was the great Marshal de Wittenberg, who took her on one occasion along with him to the court of his relative the Duke. This prince had a mistress to whom he was passionately attached, and to whom, as the favorite of the sovereign, greater obeisance was, perhaps, made than if she had been his wife. But this humble sub-servienty did not suit the imperious temper of the Parisian beauty, who left no opportunity unemployed to vex and mortify the Ducal Sultan; and was so successful in attaining this object, that she received a peremptory order to quit the court and territory of Wittenberg. Indignant beyond measure at this public insult, she brooded over projects of revenge, and suddenly quitted Paris, preserving a strict incognito to break her vengeance on the cause of her disgrace. Through numberless dangers she arrived at last in Wittenberg, and watched an opportunity for several days. Having ascertained that the favorite would be in a carriage on the public drive at a certain hour, she drove a calèche with a pair of very spirited horses, and having shown herself to her enemy, and cast on her a glance of as withering scorn as her majestic features could assume, she directed her calèche in such a way against the carriage of her rival, that she knocked off the hind wheel, and brought her to the ground. She then set off, full speed, on her homeward way, and having previously made arrangements for her flight, she succeeded in escaping the punishment which such an adventure would assuredly have brought down on her.

The Alton Riot.—A correspondent of the St. Louis Republican gives particulars in addition to those published in the Post yesterday. Mr Lovejoy perished in his third attempt to establish an abolition press. The building in which the press was located was guarded by eighteen or twenty abolitionists, and when the attack was made, Mr Lovejoy fired from a window and shot down a Mr Bishop. The enraged populace then set fire to the building. Other shots were then exchanged, when Mr Lovejoy received a mortal wound. Two other persons were wounded—the press was then given up and destroyed.

Another account states that Mr Lovejoy came out of the house and stood opposite the south west corner of the building, from which position he fired without effect several times at the man ascending a ladder to rekindle the fire. A man from behind a pile of lumber on the wharf below, fired at Mr L.; the gun was charged with two balls, both of which entered Mr L.'s body, near or in the chest. Mr L. dropped the gun he was in the act of firing, ran up into the house, and as he reached the clerk's room fell on the threshold and expired instantly. Those in the house now proposed surrendering, if the fire was put out. The crowd without ascended, and carried water in their hats to extinguish the flames. The doors were then thrown open, and as the crowd rushed in, two guns were fired, by some of those entering. The mayor, who was on the ground, attempting to quell the violence, narrowly escaped injury—ball perforated his hat. It is stated that Mr Lovejoy on the evening preceding his death, has agreed to quit Alton with his press, but was dissuaded by Dr Beecher and some others.

(3) The New York Courier and Enquirer, and American, are advocating the very doctrine for supporting which the democrats have been called "destructionists," "agrarians," and every other opprobrious name calculated to alarm the people, viz.—"FREE BANKING—throwing it open to all, who, by their capital or their credit can embark in it, and declaring that they would no more restrict banking than they would the sale of dry goods!"

It was to celebrate the supposed overthrow of such principles, exactly, that the whigs appointed their congratulatory committee to go to New York to day! Will the Boston whigs support these measures, or will they denounce them? If they speak of them in New York as they do in Massachusetts, what a ridiculous figure they will cut!

Mark closely the legislative doings in those States where the whigs have obtained the control. If they all follow in the footsteps of Rhode Island and New Jersey, the timid men who have lent a credulous ear to the gibberish of factious alarmists, will soon see the error of their ways and drop the deceitful principles of the whigs as they would hot potatoes. Time will bring everything right—our cause therefore is safe.

Murder.—Zekiah Holland, of Warren county, Ky., was recently killed on his own farm, by Thos. T. Ernest, of Simpson county. The sons of the deceased have offered a reward of five hundred dollars for the apprehension of Ernest.

On Friday night a store in Natick village, (Warwick, R. I.) occupied by Warren Briggs, was broken open and robbed of $500 in bank bills, and goods to the amount of $500. Thieves not captured.

A Correspondent recommends all Germans to attend the discourses preached in their native tongue, at the Catholic Church in Franklin street, every Sunday morning at 8 o'clock.

Mr and Miss Cooper have just concluded a profitable engagement at Augusta, Georgia.

POLICE COURT.

"I'll example you with thieving: The Sun's a thief, and with his great attraction Robs the Sea. The Moon's an arrant thief, And her pale fires she snatches from the Sun. The Sea's a thief, who liquid surge resolves The mound into salt tears. The Earth's a thief, That feeds, and breeds by a composture stolen From general excrements."

If this be true—(and did Shakespeare ever lie?)—how can Man, the son of Earth, be other than thiefishly inclined. The wonder, therefore, is, not that there are thieves in this unhappy world, but that there should be honest men. Thieves but obey the inherited law of their nature, for which, instead of punishment, they should receive commendation; and honest men, for disregarding the law of their being should be severely "examined" and "trounced." In short, our laws, written and unwritten, should be turned inside out; and if ever we are seized, like some of our contemporaries, with the frenzy of reform, and think we are just the man, and the only man marked out by destiny to set the world to rights, we shall go the entire swine for the principle laid down by "Mad Will," and approved and adopted by Ourselves. We won't be Counselor at Law, and read Blackstone and Burroughs, and, worse yet, the Revised Statutes of Massachusetts, for nothing, dearly beloved brother Lynde, of the Transcript; but will have the game as well as the name, and as "a great law reformer," leave Lord Chancellor Brougham, Jeremy Bentham, and Right-Arm Davenport, in the middle of last week, and make the dust of centuries fly in clouds from the mouldy old laws and notions of our ignorami of ancestors, worse than ever Jack Cade did. Yes,

"We'll grace our rank! We'll! We'll! We'll carry it As we were born to it! We warrant none Shall say it fits us not, but one and all Confess we wear it bravely, as we ought!"

Having thus made our confession of faith, by way of exordium, we proceed to record the doings of certain unhappy martyrs, who, for their fidelity to the law of nature, were yesterday the persecuted victims of the cruel laws of Massachusetts.

First, then, there was that poor soul, Ebenezer Burroughs, who was caught in Capt Brown's hen coop, at Chelsea, on Saturday. The Captain thought he was not a very safe companion for the lady hens and their little hubbies there peacefully roosting, and so carried him, hand-bound, down to the steamboat landing, where it was clearly established, that he had stolen a pea-jacket from the boat. Sentenced to pay a fine of Five Dollars, and Costs—with the alternative of Three Months in the House of Correction, which he rather unwillingly embraced.

Pick-pocket.—As Mr Martin Clapp, who had dropped in to pay his personal respects to Messieurs Pawnee & Co., felt a twitch at his coat tail as he was retiring from Faneuil Hall, and, in putting his hand back, discovered that his pocket had been cut off, and his wallet, containing 47 dollars among the missing. He suddenly turned round, saw Alfred Jones, immediately charged him with the theft, and then observed his wallet lying by his feet. Mr Clapp at once passed the lightning-fingered gentleman over to the officers, who searched him, and found a couple of knives fitted for his profession. He was bound over, for trial at West Point Academy.
